NOTICE OF MOTION

ALL PARTIES AND THEIR ATTORNEYS OF RECORD.

3 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE THAT at 10:00 a.m., on September 10, 2010, or as soon 4 thereafter as the matter may be heard, in Courtroom 8 of the United States District Court for the 5 Northern District of California, San Francisco Division, located at 450 Golden Gate Avenue, San 6 Francisco, California, 94102, Defendants HITACHI, LTD., a Japanese corporation, and INPRO
7 LICENSING SARL, a Luxembourg SARL, will move for an order dismissing this action.

8        This Motion is supported by Defendants' Memorandum of Points and Authorities in 9        Support of this Motion, all pleadings and documents on file with this Court, the supporting 10      declarations of Jill Kopeikin, Tesuro Yokoo, and Michael Spiro, any reply memoranda that may 11      be filed in support of the present motion, the argument of counsel, and any documentary or oral 12      evidence which may be presented at the time of hearing. A proposed order granting this Motion is 13      filed herewith.

RELIEF SOUGHT

15 Defendants Hitachi, Ltd. (“Hitachi”) and Inpro Licensing SARL (“Inpro”) move jointly to 16 dismiss this declaratory judgment action filed by Plaintiffs Top Victory Electronics (Taiwan) Co.; 17 Ltd; TPV International (USA), Inc.; TPV Electronics (Fujian) Co., Ltd.; Top Victory Electronics 18 (Fujian) Co., Ltd.; and Envision Peripherals, Inc., (collectively, “TPV”).<sup>1</sup> Specifically, 19 Defendants seek an order dismissing this action under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) 20 for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and Inpro also moves under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 21 12(b)(2) for a dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

Hitachi and Inpro move jointly to dismiss this declaratory judgment action filed by TPV. This action seeks a declaration of patent noninfringement, invalidity, and unenforceability. Yet <sup>1</sup> On information and belief, the entities referred to here collectively as “TPV” are an interrelated group of companies that together comprise one of the world’s largest television manufacturers.

1 dismissal is required because TPV failed to name any defendant with an ownership interest or an 2 exclusive license under any of the patents in-suit, and this omission means that this action is 3 devoid of a case or controversy and thus not justiciable under Article III of the U.S. Constitution.
 4 That is, no subject matter jurisdiction exists here. Moreover, a defect of subject matter 5 jurisdiction is incurable because a declaratory judgment plaintiff seeking an adjudication under 6 U.S. patent law is required to name at least one defendant who is an owner or exclusive licensee 7 of the patent(s) in question at the outset for a court to have jurisdiction. Therefore, Defendants' 8 Motion to Dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9 12(b)(1) should be granted. Additionally, dismissal as to Inpro is warranted under Federal Rule 10 of Civil Procedure 12(b)(2) for lack of personal jurisdiction.

11 II. ISSUES TO BE DECIDED

12 1. Whether a declaratory judgment plaintiff has standing to sue for a declaration 13 of patent noninfringement, invalidity, and unenforceability where none of the named 14 defendants own any of the patents-in-suit or have an exclusive license under those patents;

15 2. Whether a declaratory judgment plaintiff could even cure a lack of Article III 16 jurisdiction where neither the patent owner nor an exclusive licensee was named as a 17 defendant when the case was filed; and 18 3. Whether this Court can exercise jurisdiction over Inpro absent sufficient 19 minimum contacts with the forum state.

20 III. RELEVANT FACTS

21 TPV filed, but did not serve, the instant declaratory judgment action against Hitachi and 22 Inpro on April 14, 2010. See Doc. 1. According to the initial Complaint, TPV sought a 23 declaration that the following eighteen U.S. patents are not infringed, are invalid, and are 24 unenforceable: U.S. Patent Nos. 5,502,497; 5,534,934; 5,828,417; 6,037,995; 6,057,812; 25 6,185,228; 6,304,236; 6,388,713; 6,549,243; 6,600,870; 6,639,588; 6,686,895; 6,693,966; 26 7,012,769; 7,089,342; 7,286,310; 7,475,180; and 7,475,181. Doc. 1 at ¶ 2. When TPV filed this 27 declaratory judgment action, TPV was already defending a patent infringement action in the 28 Eastern District of Texas (“EDTX”), pending since December 23, 2008, wherein TPV is accused

1 of infringing seven of the same patents. See Declaration of Jill Kopeikin (“Kopeikin Decl.”) at 2 Ex. A (the “EDTX Action”).<sup>2</sup> The EDTX Action, filed by third-party Mondis Technologies, Ltd.
 3 (“Mondis”), made clear that Mondis owns the right, title, and interest in and to the patents at issue 4 in the EDTX action. See id. ¶ 11. The EDTX Action is still pending in relation to the same or 5 similar television products that are the subject of these proceedings.<sup>3</sup> The EDTX Action involves 6 ten patents, including the following seven that TPV initially included in this declaratory judgment 7 action: U.S. Patent Nos. 6,057,812; 6,304,236; 6,639,588; 6,686,895; 7,089,342; 7,475,180; and 8 7,475,181 (the “Mondis Patents”). See id. ¶¶ 21-100. TPV was fully aware that these seven 9 Mondis Patents were owned by Mondis, not Hitachi or Inpro, when TPV filed the instant action.

10 About two weeks after filing this action, TPV filed its First Amended Complaint for 11 Declaratory Judgment. See Doc. 7. In its amended pleading, TPV dropped the Mondis Patents 12 from the eighteen patents-in-suit. See id. The Mondis Patents that TPV dropped are the ones that 13 had been asserted against TPV by the actual patentee in the EDTX Action nearly two years ago.
 14 See Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. A. Therefore, the instant action now asks this Court to make 15 determinations regarding the following eleven U.S. Patent Nos.: 5,502,497; 5,534,934; 16 5,828,417; 6,037,995; 6,185,228; 6,388,713; 6,549,243; 6,600,870; 6,693,966; 7,012,769; and 17 7,286,310 (“patents-in-suit”). See Doc. 7 ¶ 2.

18 TPV alleges that Hitachi and Inpro either co-own or are exclusive licensees under these 19 eleven patents. Doc. 7 ¶¶ 14-15. And TPV named Hitachi and Inpro as the sole defendants in 20 this action. But neither Hitachi nor Inpro owns or holds an exclusive license under any of the 21

22 <sup>2</sup> Exhibit A to the Kopeikin Decl. is the Third Amend. Cmplt., filed in Mondis Technology Ltd v.
 23 Top Victory Electronics (Taiwan) Co. Ltd.; TPV Int’l (USA), Inc.; Envision Peripherals, Inc.; 24 Top Victory Electronics (Fujian) Co. Ltd.; TPV Electronics (Fujian) Co. Ltd.; AOC International; 25 and TPV Technology Ltd, Civil Case No. 2:08-cv-478 (E.D. Tex.).

26 <sup>3</sup> In fact, when TPV filed this declaratory judgment action, TPV also filed another declaratory 27 judgment action in the Northern District of California against Mondis and Inpro in relation to the 28 Mondis Patents and TPV’s television products. TPV then applied to the EDTX to transfer the EDTX Action to this district. Those efforts failed. A copy of the Memorandum and Order of the EDTX dated July 29, 2010, denying TPV’s renewed motion to transfer the EDTX Action, is Exhibit F to the Kopeikin Decl. After that Order was entered, TPV voluntarily dismissed the improvident action.

1       patents-in-suit. All but one of the patents-in-suit are owned by Hitachi Consumer Electronics
 2       Co., Ltd. (“HCE”) of Japan; and one patent, 6,388,713, is owned jointly by HCE and Hitachi
 3       Advanced Digital, Inc. (“HAD”). See Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. B ¶¶ 5, 11.<sup>4</sup> HCE has had a joint 4       interest in the 6,388,713 patent and owned all of the other patents-in-suit since July 1, 2009—
 5       nearly a year before TPV filed the instant action.<sup>5</sup> Id. HCE acquired its rights, title, and interest 6       in and to the patents-in-suit through a Demerger Plan governed by Japanese law. Id. ¶¶ 6-11.
 7       HAD has owned the joint interest in the 6,388,713 patent even longer. Id. ¶ 11. Therefore, 8       Hitachi, Ltd. has not owned any interest in any of the patents-in-suit since July 1, 2009, before 9       the instant lawsuit was filed. Id. ¶ 9. Inpro has never owned any interest in any of these patents.
 10      Id. ¶¶ 5-11; see also Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. C.<sup>6</sup>

11       The patents-in-suit, owned entirely by HCE and HAD, involve the same products at issue 12       in the EDTX Action in which TPV has been involved for over nineteen months. And recently, 13       HCE and HAD, the owners of the patents at issue here, filed suit against TPV in that same 14       district for infringement. See Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. D.<sup>7</sup> Here, TPV acted precipitately, suing the 15       wrong parties in an unseemly “race” to be the first to file an action. Under governing law,

16

 17       declaration is submitted solely for the purpose of supporting the instant Motion to Dismiss by 18       establishing the actual ownership of the patents-in-suit. The declarant does not waive any 19       objections that Mr. Yokoo, HCE, and HAD may have to this Court exercising personal 20       jurisdiction over them in this or any other action.

21      

 22       <http://assignments.uspto.gov/assignments/?db=pat>) incorrectly suggests that Hitachi assigned the 23       patents-in-suit to HCE on May 25, 2010. May 25, 2010 is the date when the record of the 24       assignments was filed with the USPTO. But Hitachi made the assignments pursuant to the July 1, 25       2009 Demerger Plan, as described in Mr. Yokoo’s Declaration. See Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. B ¶¶ 6-26       11. The transfer of all rights to the patents-in-suit was confirmed in a Recordable Confirmation of 27       Assignment dated July 15, 2010, which is attached to Mr. Yokoo’s Declaration as Exhibit 2.

28      

 29       submitted solely for the purpose of supporting the instant Motion to Dismiss by establishing the 30       actual ownership of the patents-in-suit. The declarant does not waive any objections that Mr.
 31       Spiro and Inpro may have to this Court exercising personal jurisdiction over them in this or any 32       other action.

33      

 34       Ltd. and Hitachi Advanced Digital, Inc. v. Top Victory Electronics (Taiwan) Co. Ltd.; TPV Int’l
 35       (USA), Inc.; Envision Peripherals, Inc.; Top Victory Electronics (Fujian) Co. Ltd.; TPV 36       Electronics (Fujian) Co. Ltd.; AOC International; and TPV Technology Ltd, Civil Case No.
 37       2:10-cv-260 (E.D. Tex.).

1 however, the failure to name the correct parties at the outset of this action cannot be cured and 2 thus TPV cannot, as a matter of law, pursue the instant action.

3 IV. ARGUMENT

4 A. Dismissing This Action Is Required Under Rule 12(b)(1)

5 1. Rule 12(b)(1) Requires Dismissal For Lack Of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

6 Subject matter jurisdiction is fundamental and cannot be waived. Billingsley v. C.I.R., 868 7 F.2d 1081, 1085 (9th Cir. 1989) (citations omitted). This is because Article III, Section 2 of the 8 Constitution limits the jurisdiction of federal courts to those lawsuits that present an actual 9 “case” or “controversy.” Absent a case or controversy, a district court must dismiss the 10 complaint. See Samsung Elecs. Co., Ltd. v. Rambus, Inc., 523 F.3d 1374, 1378 (Fed. Cir. 2008) 11 (remanding with instructions to dismiss where district court entertained action devoid of case or 12 controversy); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1). “Standing to sue or defend is an aspect of the 13 case-or-controversy requirement,” id., and litigants can raise defects in standing as a basis for 14 dismissal at any stage of a lawsuit. Pandrol USA, LP v. Airboss Ry. Prods., Inc., 320 F.3d 1354, 15 1367 (Fed. Cir. 2003).

16 Article III requires that a plaintiff have standing to sue when a lawsuit is initiated, which a 17 plaintiff shows by alleging each of the following: (i) that it has suffered an injury in fact, which 18 is an invasion of a legally protected interest; (ii) that there is a causal connection between the 19 injury and the conduct complained of; and (iii) that it is likely, as opposed to merely speculative, 20 that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision. See Paradise Creations, Inc. v. UV 21 Sales, Inc., 315 F.3d 1304, 1308 (Fed. Cir. 2003) (citing Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S.
 22 555, 561 (1992)). In patent cases, only the “patentee” has a statutory right to bring an action for 23 infringement. See 35 U.S.C. § 281 (2004). As the Supreme Court explained almost 90 years 24 ago:

25 Both at law and in equity, either the owner of the patent at the time of the past 26 infringement, or the subsequent owner of the patent who is at the same time the 27 assignee of the claims for past infringement, must be a party to a suit for 28 damages for the past infringement. If the owner of the patent when the infringements took place has assigned his patent to one, and his claims for damages for infringement to another, then the latter cannot sue at law at all but must compel his assignor of the claims to sue for him. In equity both such 1 assignor and the assignee who is the real party in interest must join as plaintiffs.

 2 Such assignor is a necessary party and a bill for accounting and damages is fatally defective otherwise.

3 Crown Die & Tool Co. v. Nye Tool & Machine Works, 261 U.S. 24, 44 (1923) (citations omitted).
 4 Since Crown Die & Tool was decided, courts have expanded the concept of standing to sue in 5 patent infringement cases to exclusive licensees. See, e.g., Sicom Sys., Ltd. v. Agilent Techs., Inc., 6 427 F.3d 971, 976 (Fed. Cir. 2005). But only patent owners, their assignees, and their exclusive 7 patent licensees have standing to sue for infringement. Id.; see also Mentor H/S, Inc. v. Medical 8 Device Alliance, Inc., 240 F.3d 1016, 1017 (Fed. Cir. 2001) (holding that plaintiff did not have 9 standing to bring patent infringement claim without joining the patent owner).

10 In the ordinary course, where the plaintiff files an action for patent infringement, the 11 Federal Circuit has held that “if the original plaintiff lacked Article III initial standing, the suit 12 must be dismissed, and the jurisdictional defect cannot be cured by the addition of a party with 13 standing. . . .” Schreiber Foods, Inc. v. Beatrice Cheese, Inc., 402 F.3d 1198, 1203 (Fed. Cir.
 14 2005) (citing Paradise Creations, 315 F.3d at 1309). Similar rules govern declaratory judgment 15 actions because the Declaratory Judgment Act (the “Act”) does not confer an independent basis 16 for subject matter jurisdiction. Skelly Oil Co. v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 339 U.S. 667, 671-72
 17 (1950). Instead, a declaratory judgment plaintiff may rely on the Act only if the court otherwise 18 has jurisdiction over the underlying dispute. Prasco, LLC v. Medicis Pharm. Corp., 537 F.3d 19 1329, 1335 (Fed. Cir. 2008).

20 The proper test for subject matter jurisdiction in a declaratory relief action is “whether the 21 facts alleged, under all the circumstances, show that there is a substantial controversy, between 22 the parties having adverse legal interests, of sufficient immediacy and reality to warrant the 23 issuance of a declaratory judgment.” MedImmune, Inc. v. Genentech, Inc., 549 U.S. 118, 126 24 (2007). That is, for a case or controversy to exist under Article III, “the dispute must be ‘definite 25 and concrete, touching the legal relations of parties having adverse legal interests,’ ‘real and 26 substantial,’ and ‘admi[t] of specific relief through a decree of conclusive character, as 27 distinguished from an opinion advising what the law would be upon a hypothetical state of 28 facts.’” Prasco, 537 F.3d at 1335-36 (quoting MedImmune, 549 U.S. at 126).

1           In short, the case or controversy requirement cannot be satisfied if the patent 2 owner/exclusive licensee is not a party at the outset. And a district court must dismiss a 3 declaratory judgment action brought by a plaintiff seeking a declaration of patent 4 noninfringement, invalidity, or unenforceability where the party sued is neither the patent owner 5 nor the exclusive licensee of the patent owner. See Enzo APA & Son, Inc. v. Geapag A.G., 134 6 F.3d 1090, 1091 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (dismissing case where “controversy began . . . , when [the 7 accused infringer as plaintiff] brought an action for declaratory judgment against [defendant], 8 seeking a judgment of patent invalidity and noninfringement. . . .”).

9           Enzo is the dispositive case here. In Enzo, the plaintiffs had brought a declaratory 10 judgment action for patent noninfringement and invalidity against the defendants, none of whom 11 were owners or exclusive licensees at the time the suit was filed. Id. at 1091-92. Having 12 prevailed on the merits before the district court, the defendants argued on appeal that they had 13 sufficient ownership rights to defend against the declaratory judgment claims that had been made 14 against them. Id. at 1092-94. The Federal Circuit, however, rejected all of their arguments, 15 including the contention that they had become virtual assignees through an assignment concluded 16 nunc pro tunc while the litigation was pending. Id. at 1093-94. And because the Federal Circuit 17 found the defendants “to be without standing for failing to join the patentee,” it also found that 18 “the [district] court lacks jurisdiction over [the plaintiff’s] declaratory judgment claims . . . .” Id. at 19 1094.

20           Another judge in this same district recently applied Enzo in adjudicating a motion similar 21 to the instant Motion to Dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. See Newmatic Sound Sys., 22 Inc., v. Magnacoustics, Inc., No. C 10-00129-JSW, 2010 WL 1691862 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 23, 23 2010).<sup>8</sup> In Newmatic Sound, this Court granted the defendant’s motion to dismiss after assessing 24 the scope of its jurisdiction over a declaratory judgment action originally filed against a party that 25 did not own the patent-in-suit—as is the case here. Id. at *2. And the Court considered the 26 identical issues presented here: “(1) whether, in the absence of the correct party named as 27 defendant, the action presents an Article III case or controversy and (2) whether subsequent 28 <sup>8</sup> The opinion is Exhibit E to the Kopeikin Decl.

1 amendment to the complaint may cure the original defect in standing.” Id. The Court correctly 2 concluded that a district court must dismiss a declaratory judgment complaint “where the party
 3 sued is neither the patent owner [n]or the exclusive licensee of the patent owner.” Id. at *3 (citing 4 Enzo APA & Son, Inc. v. Geapag A.G., 134 F.3d 1090, 1091 (Fed. Cir. 1998)).

5 As the Newmatic Sound Court explained, in bringing a declaratory judgment action 6 involving patent rights, the Federal Circuit requires that “the plaintiff must have standing to sue 7 the defendant at the inception of the lawsuit.” Id. (emphasis added). Therefore, the Court in 8 Newmatic Sound held that an amendment adding the true patentee (filed before the motion to 9 dismiss had been adjudicated) could not cure the jurisdictional defect; the case had to be 10 dismissed. Id. at *4 (citing Schreiber Foods, 402 F.3d at 1203; Enzo, 134 F.3d at 1093-94).<sup>9</sup>

11 In sum, where a declaratory judgment plaintiff in a patent case fails to name as a defendant 12 an owner or exclusive licensee of the patent, the district court must dismiss the complaint for 13 want of Article III standing.

14 2. Neither Defendant Has Standing To Defend This Action; Therefore, This 15 Action Is Devoid Of A Case Or Controversy

16 TPV has sued two parties that have no ownership interest whatsoever in the patents-in-17 suit, seeking a declaration of noninfringement, invalidity, and unenforceability. See Kopeikin 18 Decl. at Exs. B & C. Therefore, Article III standing is absent and TPV’s lawsuit must be 19 dismissed.<sup>10</sup>

20

21 <sup>9</sup> Apparently, in Newmatic Sound, the plaintiff originally sued only Magnacoustics based on 22 defense counsel’s misrepresentation that the inventor’s company, and not the inventor, owned the 23 patent at issue. See Newmatic Sound, 2010 WL 1691862, *4. Nevertheless, the Court recognized 24 that it was “compelled to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.” Id. That is, even 25 equitable considerations do not change the calculus. A fortiori, this case, where no such equitable 26 concerns exists, must be dismissed under Enzo.

27 <sup>10</sup> TPV’s claims regarding the patents-in-suit can, in any event, be addressed in an action filed by 28 the actual owners of these patents: HCE and HAD. Indeed, HCE and HAD has sued TPV for 29 infringement of these patents in the EDTD. See Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. D. Moreover, the EDTD 30 is the proper forum for resolving TPV’s claims because a related patent infringement action 31 against TPV, involving the same products, has been pending in that district since December 2008.
 32 See Kopeikin Decl. at Exs. A & F. Further, the EDTD lawsuit was the first filed by parties with 33 standing to pursue claims under the patents-in-suit.

1           Had Hitachi or Inpro filed a lawsuit against TPV for infringing the patents-in-suit, that 2 lawsuit would clearly be outside the scope of any federal court's Article III jurisdiction. In such a 3 hypothetical, this Court would lack jurisdiction because neither Hitachi nor Inpro owns any 4 interest in any of the patents such that either can allege a legally cognizable injury, i.e., that TPV 5 has invaded a legally protected right to exclude others from making, using, or selling the 6 inventions covered by the patents-in-suit. See Paradise Creations, 315 F.3d at 1310; see also 7 35 U.S.C. § 271(a) (“[W]hoever without authority makes, uses, offers to sell, or sells any 8 patented invention, within the United States, or imports into the United States any patented 9 invention during the term of the patent therefore, infringes the patent.”).
 10

11           Just as Hitachi and Inpro would lack standing to sue for infringement, they lack standing 12 to defend against TPV's claims of patent noninfringement, invalidity, and unenforceability. And 13 dismissal is the only proper way to remedy this jurisdictional defect. See Enzo, 134 F.3d at 1091.
 14

15           Whatever TPV's subjective belief may have been regarding the ownership of the patents-16 in-suit is immaterial because subject matter jurisdiction is assessed based on an objective 17 standard, focusing on the patentee's actual legal rights. Similarly, TPV's subjective or 18 speculative belief that some entity might assert its rights vis-à-vis the patents-in-suit against TPV 19 does not mean that an actionable case or controversy exists here. See Prasco, LLC, 537 F.3d at 20 1339 (stating that “a case or controversy must be based on a real and immediate injury or threat 21 of future injury that is caused by the defendants—an objective standard that cannot be met by a 22 purely subjective or speculative fear of future harm”) (emphasis retained). Nor can TPV create 23 subject matter jurisdiction by trying to join the actual owner of the patents-in-suit at this juncture.
 24 See Newmatic Sound, 2010 WL 1691862, *3. Constitutional standing in patent cases must exist 25 at the case's inception, and a post-filing joinder of a party with standing cannot be employed to 26 create a justiciable case or controversy retroactively. Schreiber Foods, 402 F.3d at 1203; see 27
 28

2 B. Dismissal of Inpro Is Required under Rule 12(b)(2)

3 1. Rule 12(b)(2) Requires Dismissal For Lack Of Personal Jurisdiction

4 Under Federal Circuit law, this Court cannot exercise personal jurisdiction over Inpro.

5 Because “personal jurisdiction in a declaratory action for patent invalidity and non-infringement 6 is intimately related to patent law,” Federal Circuit law governs the issue. Silent Drive, Inc. v.

7 Strong Indus., Inc., 326 F.3d 1194, 1201 (Fed. Cir. 2003) (citations omitted). The Federal

8 Circuit, like other federal courts, assesses personal jurisdiction by deferring to the forum state’s

9 interpretation of its long-arm statute. 3D Sys., Inc. v. Aarotech Labs., Inc., 160 F.3d 1373, 1377

10 (Fed. Cir. 1998). The “forum state” here is California. California broadly grants jurisdiction “on 11 any basis not inconsistent with the Constitution of this state or the United States.” Cal. Code of 12 Civ. Pro. § 410.10. Because California’s long-arm statute is as broad as the Constitution, the only 13 applicable inquiry here is the one dictated by the U.S. Supreme Court’s interpretation of what 14 comports with due process.

15 Because neither Defendant resides in California, due process requires that each has certain

16 “minimum contacts” with the forum state such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend

17 “traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.” Int’l Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S.

18 310, 316 (1945). And such minimum contacts must generally be purposeful. Burger King Corp.

19 v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 474 (1985) (“purposefully established minimum contacts” remains 20 the “constitutional touchstone”) (internal quotations omitted). A plaintiff may show that

21 purposeful minimum contacts are sufficient to exercise either “general” or “specific” jurisdiction

22 over a defendant. Helicopteros Nacionales de Columbia, S.A. v. Hall, 466 U.S. 408, 414 (1984).

23 But “general jurisdiction” exists only where the defendant’s contacts with the forum state are 24 “continuous and systematic.” Id. at 418 (finding “mere purchases, even if occurring at regular 25 intervals, are not enough” to establish general jurisdiction). “This is an exacting standard, as it

26 should be, because a finding of general jurisdiction permits a defendant to be haled into court in 27 the forum state to answer for any of its activities anywhere in the world.” Schwarzenegger v.

28

1      Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d 797, 800 (9th Cir. 2004). By contrast, “specific jurisdiction” 2 attaches when (1) a non-resident purposefully directs its activities towards forum residents; (2) 3 the action arises out of or results from the defendant’s forum contacts; and (3) the forum’s 4 exercise of jurisdiction would not be unreasonable. Burger King, 471 U.S. at 477-478.

5      On a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff (here, TPV) bears the 6 burden of establishing a prima facie basis for personal jurisdiction. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d at 7 800. To carry its burden, TPV must produce admissible evidence, which, if believed, would be 8 sufficient to establish the existence of personal jurisdiction. Von Grabe v. Sprint PCS, 312 F.
 9 Supp. 2d 1285, 1297 (S.D. Cal. 2003) (citing Sher v. Johnson, 911 F.2d 1357, 1361 (9th Cir.
 10 1990)). Moreover, only the plaintiff’s actual showing regarding jurisdictional facts—not 11 assertions of legal conclusions, unsupported by competent facts—can satisfy its burden. Fields v.
 12 Sedgwick Associated Risks, Ltd., 796 F.2d 299, 301 (9th Cir. 1986).

13      2.      TPV Has Failed To Allege A Prima Facie Basis For Personal Jurisdiction And 14 Cannot Show That General Or Specific Jurisdiction Exists As To Inpro

15      TPV’s Complaint does not include any specific allegations suggesting a basis for 16 exercising personal jurisdiction over Inpro. In TPV’s First Amended Complaint, the only 17 allegation related to venue is the following:

18      Venue is proper in this district under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) and (d). Plaintiffs TPV 19 INTERNATIONAL (USA), INC. and ENVISION PERIPHERALS, INC. are 20 California corporations. Plaintiff ENVISION PERIPHERALS, INC. has its headquarters in Alameda County, California. This action includes patent-based declaratory judgment claims arising from conduct occurring in or directed to Alameda County.

21      Doc. 7 ¶ 4. This generalized assertion, on its face, is insufficient to make a prima facie case that 22 Inpro had relevant contacts with the forum. Moreover, the statement is inaccurate. Inpro did not 23 take any actions related to the patents-in-suit “in or directed to Alameda County.” Inpro has not 24 taken any actions of any kind related to the patents-in-suit directed in or to Alameda County—or 25 anywhere else—because Inpro has no interest in the patents at issue here. See Kopeikin Decl. at 26 Exs. B & C. And TPV has not actually alleged any facts suggesting that non-resident Inpro has 27 had germane minimum contacts with this forum, that exercise of jurisdiction over Inpro would 28 not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice, or that Inpro has conceded

1 personal jurisdiction regarding the underlying dispute. Nor can TPV come forward with 2 competent evidence to make this prima facie showing now.

3 As even TPV must acknowledge, Inpro does not reside in California. See Doc. 7 ¶ 12; 4 see also Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. C ¶ 2. Inpro is a Luxembourg SARL and a non-practicing entity, 5 which does not maintain an office in California, has no employees in California, and does not 6 regularly conduct business in California. Id. ¶ 5. Inpro has never been involved in any licensing 7 activities related to the patents-in-suit—let alone any licensing activities directed at California.<sup>11</sup> 8 Id. ¶ 6. Indeed, Inpro has not had any contacts of any kind with any California entity.

9 Inpro has no sustained connection with California. Id. ¶ 8. Therefore, TPV cannot 10 reasonably suggest that Inpro has sufficient contacts with California such that “general 11 jurisdiction” exists. See Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d at 800 (explaining “exacting” nature of the 12 standard). And because this declaratory judgment action does not arise out of or relate to either 13 Defendant’s contacts with California, there is no reasonable basis for arguing that Inpro (or 14 Hitachi) is amenable to “specific jurisdiction” in this forum. See, by contrast, Elecs. for 15 Imaging, Inc. v. Coyle, 340 F.3d 1344, 1350-51 (Fed. Cir. 2003) (finding plaintiff had made a 16 prima facie case for specific jurisdiction against a Nevada patentee in California with evidence 17 that patentee purposefully directed his activity toward California before suit was filed by (1) 18 hiring a California patent lawyer that contacted the opposing party in California frequently to 19 update them on the status of the patent application, (2) telephoning the opposing party in 20 California regarding the subject matter of the patent frequently, and (3) sending representatives 21 to the opposing party in California to demonstrate the invention); see also Doe v. Unocal Corp., 22 248 F.3d 915, 923 (9th Cir. 2001) (explaining test for establishing specific jurisdiction and 23 finding insufficient contacts for specific jurisdiction to lie).

25 <sup>11</sup> A different entity, related to Inpro, attended a few mediations in California over the years as 26 agent of a third party; but those mediations had nothing to do with this lawsuit or with any of the 27 patents at issue here. Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. C ¶ 9. But even if Inpro had been to California for 28 mediations (which it has not), such contacts are not relevant to the personal jurisdiction inquiry.
 The test for specific jurisdiction requires that the claim against the defendant be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant’s forum-related activities “measured in terms of ‘but for’ causation.” Bancroft & Masters, Inc. v. Augusta Nat’l, Inc., 223 F.3d 1082, 1088 (9th Cir. 2000).

1           The dispute underlying this action does not arise out of either Defendant's contacts with 2 this forum. Instead, this improper declaratory judgment action was merely a "race to the 3 courthouse" intended to preempt a patent infringement suit by the actual patentees—HCE and 4 HAD—and thereby deprive them of their chosen forum.<sup>12</sup> See Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. D. In any 5 event, TPV cannot establish that Inpro has sufficient "minimum contacts" with California such 6 that it is amenable to suit here. See Pieczenik v. Dyax Corp., 265 F.3d 1329, 1334 (Fed. Cir.
 7 2001); see also LeDuc v. Ky. Cent. Life Ins. Co., 814 F. Supp. 820, 824 (N.D. Cal. 1992). Thus, 8 subjecting Inpro to suit here would "offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial 9 justice." Int'l Shoe, 326 U.S. at 316.

10 V. CONCLUSION

11           For the foregoing reasons, TPV's Complaint for Declaratory Judgment and First 12 Amended Complaint for Declaratory Judgment fail to raise a justiciable case or controversy 13 within the scope of this Court's Article III jurisdiction. Therefore, this case lacks subject matter 14 jurisdiction and should be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(1). Moreover, all claims against Inpro 15 should be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(2) for lack of personal jurisdiction.

16

18

---

19           <sup>12</sup> Even if TPV had sued the correct parties here—which TPV did not do—this action would need 20 to be dismissed under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(3). That is, courts routinely dismiss 21 duplicative declaratory judgment claims filed for the improper purpose of preventing the plaintiff 22 from filing its affirmative infringement claims in its chosen forum. See, e.g., China Healthways
Inst., Inc. v. Hsin Ten Enter. USA, Inc., 67 U.S.P.Q. 2d 1561, 1567-68 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 12, 2003) 23 (finding defendant had filed declaratory judgment claims of noninfringement in its home forum 24 for the improper purpose of forum-shopping); Mediostream, Inc. v. Priddis Music, Inc., No. C 07-25 2127-PJH, 2007 WL 2790686, *2-3 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 24, 2007) (noting the Act "should not be 26 invoked to deprive a plaintiff the choice of forum and timing" and finding declaratory judgment 27 action filed in defendant's home forum to be an improper anticipatory suit); Z-Line Designs, Inc. v. Bell'O Int'l, LLC, 218 F.R.D. 663, 666-67 (N.D. Cal. 2003) (dismissing declaratory judgment 28 action filed by a party accused of copyright infringement to secure its choice of forum in anticipation of a suit by the copyright holder); Mill Creek Press, Inc. v. Thomas Kinkade Co., 3:04-CV-1213-G, 2004 WL 2607987, *9 (N.D. Tex. Nov. 16, 2004) (finding declaratory judgment action had been filed "for the improper purpose of 'subverting the real plaintiff's advantage'" in anticipation of litigation and should be dismissed). Further, the correct parties—the patentees with an exclusive right to sue under the patents-in-suit—have already brought an infringement suit against TPV in the EDDTX. See Kopeikin Decl. at Ex. D.
